

CONFLICT OF HISTORY AND SOCIAL SCIENCES IN CONFLICT, CONVERGENCE AND CONSERVATION

Bain

Department of History, Faculty of Social Sciences, Semarang State University

ABSTRACT

Intelligence and social wisdom mark such a long dialogue between historians and social sciences experts in... Since its appearance, social sciences has a unique relationship with... considered the pioneer of the social sciences in the 18th century not only have the most extensive... history, but also a reliable history of the reviewer. However, since its appearance in the 19th... social sciences is growing very rapidly, forcing the historians do the reforms, especially in terms of data... The great and very influential historians in the 19th century is Ranke who develop political... the use of government data source file. Ranke and other political historians reject the concepts and... by the experts of the social sciences. Instead of the time the expert social sciences also opposed the... of historians. Development leading to convergence occurred in the 20th century, mainly due to the... the study of the social sciences expert to the past and the occurrence of major changes in the disciplines... of the political history of social history to receive and utilize both theories social.

Keywords: social science, political history, and social history

INTRODUCTION

The values of social conservation are based on 2 (two) pillars. They are social intelligence and social... social intelligence consists of empathy, intelligence, innovative, resilient and cooperation values. ... wisdom consists of wisdom, honesty, caring, solidarity, responsibility, justice, and love values ... January-February 2015: 1). The values of social intelligence and social wisdom are so visible ... a very long dialogue between historians and social sciences experts. Though they are con- ... opinions, principles and concepts, they also, in some ways, cooperate in something that are ... and needed each other. They discard the old values that are considered to be no longer useful. ... conserve the old values that are still useful and discover new values until both the history and ... find their form as they appear today.

Historians and social sciences are not always the most good colleagues. They be partners because in ... they are both looking at society as a whole. Historians and experts of social sciences is almost im- ... from the interplay between each other. Historians are working on a specific area usually ... as a unique complexity, but the things that are considered unique by the historian is not ... because there are also in other places. Meanwhile, experts of social sciences show their lack ... in the context of time. The communities they studied is not just appeared at that time or merely ... of social changes that often they discussed, but rather is the result of a long process of develop-

Thus, historians and the social science experts sciences should have a collegial relationship of mu- ... Ironically, each party tend to view others as stereotypes. Some historians, particularly in Europe ... scientists - social sciences as the experts who assess people who obviously distorted, like jargon ... less take into account the context of place and time, and insert individuals into certain categories ... to other individuals. Conversely, some scientists - social science sees the historian's work as an ... collect the facts without a system or a particular method and not able to analyze the data ac- ... So, although they can complement each other but they still do not have the same language. Their ... as stated by the French historian, Braudel, is a mute dialogue (Braudel, 1980: 64).

The difference in these two disciplines in full must be seen as a profession and subculture differ- ... such as differences in language, values and mentality or way of thinking and socialization. The ex- ... of social sciences for example ordinary formulate general laws and often ignore the small things. ... historians studying trends in concrete is an extension of the general patterns (Denning, 1973: 673). ... that perspective it appears that the relationship between the social sciences and history is not to be ... Theoretically, some scientists - social sciences seen as a historian when they tell political ... like what is Von Ranke did in the 19th century that still has influence.

However some historians still regard the social sciences as a science that do generalization without ... empirical research, and conversely, the experts of social sciences sees the historians as a scien-